“The End Of The Oil Age” — Space Ads

#1: Wharton Economist Makes Shocking Prediction
A renowned economist and financial author who correctly predicted the dot com bubble, $100 a barrel oil, the 2009 market rebound, and gold shattering $1,500 an ounce just made the boldest prediction of his 37-year career. He’s calling this one, “the biggest investment opportunity of our lifetime.” And it’s not one you’ll want to miss. Click here for details.

#2: Japanese Billionaire Sinks $1B Into “Strange Black Rectangle”
Japan’s richest man has a “midas touch.” He made his money placing smart, well-timed bets on technology companies and riding them to huge wins. Recently, he’s became a major investor in the most ambitious alternative energy project ever proposed. The $200 billion deal involves a 5,000 square kilometer “black rectangle” in one of the most unlikely places on earth. The details will shock you. Click here for more.

#3: 80 Years Of Economic Tyranny Is Grinding To A Screeching Halt
For the better part of a century, OPEC nations have used oil as a “weapon of economic destruction.” They’ve colluded on global supply, manipulated prices, and wreaked financial havoc around the globe whenever it suited them. All of that is about to change dramatically. A shocking $200 billion project is about to democratize the global energy supply. And it’s happening in the least likely place on the planet. Click here for details.

#4 “Global Energy Transformation” Could Triple Your Money In The Next 6 Months
A renowned Wharton economist is predicting an imminent, “permanent change in the way we generate, store, and consume energy well into the next century.” And this transformation is kicking off with a $200 billion project in what he calls “the least likely place on the planet.” Investors who act before a critical announcement in the coming weeks could triple their money before the end of the year. Click here for more.